

Making Connections – School and Home Computer Use

Read the excerpts from the YCSD AUP on the left side of the table. How are these guidelines for staying safe when using school computers similar to decisions you make to stay safe when using your home computer.

School Use	Home Use
System users have no right of privacy nor an expectation of privacy for any activities conducted on any division computer system or the Network, including but not limited to e-mail or materials sent, received and/or stored on any division system.
Students and staff may access information from outside resources via the Internet that facilitates or supports learning and educational activities.
Students and staff may download and transfer data files necessary and approved for daily instruction over the network provided that such activity does not violate copyright or other laws, no fees are incurred, and/or no freeware, shareware, games or other executable files are placed on Network stores.
Users must maintain the privacy and security of passwords and accounts.
Users shall respect the property of others. Users shall not access, modify or delete any Network files, documents, applications or data files belonging to others.
Users shall properly use and care for all hardware and ancillary computer and network equipment
